John is a leading dispute advisory expert advising clients and providing objective analysis of transactions in major commercial disputes.

He draws on skills from accounting, finance, costing and general commercial advice to deliver analysis and opinions on issues that generally involve large data sets or complex issues. A significant part of his work involves the provision of valuation advice related to assets, equities and other matters in dispute settings.

John provides expert evidence in commercial matters where there are significant differences (or disagreements) of financial outcomes. His role requires the preparation of simple yet comprehensive reports and financial models to assist the court or arbitration. John's key objective is to simplify concepts for readers who are not subject matter experts.

John uses his expert witness experience in a pro-active way by advising major corporate and government bodies as they enter long-term agreements. He also regularly draws on data analytics and electronic discovery solutions to access large volumes or disperse sets of data.
